

STOOP bench

Designed by
Julien De Smedt

Stoop bench is an informal, sociable meeting place based on the universal idea of using steps as places for sitting. The shape means that an urban auditorium can be created using several benches, with each bench being able to accommodate up to nine people. The Stoop Mini bench is a smaller version of the popular Stoop bench. It works as a social and playful meeting place and is based on the universal idea of using steps as seating. Its shape enables several benches to form an urban auditorium where each bench has space for up to five people.
